

ABSTRACT

A short-range communication RFID is incorporated in a top stop of a slide fastener and a long-range communication RFID is provided to a second pull-tab member removably attached to a first pull-tab member of the slider, so that an identification medium for true-false decision on an article and a fastening product, and an identification medium for commodity distribution control on the article can be respectively mounted on the article, secrecy can be secured by removing the identification medium for commodity distribution control from the article, and the removed identification medium for commodity distribution control can be mounted on another new article.